

Abstract

The invention relates to a container treatment machine having a frame, a table top inclined to the horizontal being attached to the topside so that at least one collecting opening for fluids, container fragments or similar foreign bodies is formed in the table top and the areas of the table top connected to the collecting opening are inclined with a downward slope to the collecting opening.